

AMONG THE MANSIONS OF EDEN

Tales of Love, Lust, and Land
in Beverly Hills

Laghi and Sean Desmond, also provided important assistance on numerous occasions.

I also owe a great debt to my editor, Henry Ferris, who believed in this project, provided important insights, guidance, and exercised extraordinary patience while waiting for the completed manuscript to finally arrive on his desk. When it did, Henry empowered me to be ruthless with my own material, helped to shape and refine the text and make this a much better book. Copy editor Shelly Perron made a significant contribution with her sharp eye for detail. Shelly corrected misspellings and made hundreds of suggestions that strengthened, tightened, and sharpened the clarity of the text. And my good friend Jesse Graham, as always, offered constructive criticism and helped me make a number of important improvements to the prose.

I would also like to thank: Marc Wanamaker, archivist for the Beverly Hills Historical Society, for his truly breathtaking knowledge of the city's history, which he lent to me on a number of occasions; Robert Anderson, for providing key insights and archival material on the city's formative years; John Bercsi, for his unceasing generosity and honesty, and for providing the inspiration from which this book sprang; Bruce Nelson, for his time and for digging deep into his memories of Beverly Hills's golden era; Leonard Maltin, for obtaining a rare videotape of Beverly Hills's fiftieth anniversary; Joe Hecht and Dick Van Patten, for their help and support; Michael Moldofsky and Amy Archibald, for their adventurous spirit and unconventional insights; Cheryl, Ralph, and Moacir Jones, for courageously unearthing painful memories; Richard Marconi, for his remarkable candor; Richardson Robertson III, for all his time, patience, and expertise; Dennis Kightley, who was there at the beginning and contributed important photographs; Bradley Thompson, who also donated his photographic expertise.

I would also like to thank the staff of the Beverly Hills Planning Department, the city clerk's office, and numerous other city employees who never failed to go the extra mile to produce hard-to-locate facts and documentation, and who always did so with boundless enthusiasm. The same can be said for the staffs of the Beverly Hills Public Library, the Los Angeles Public Library, the Payson Library at Pepperdine University, the Malibu Public Library, and the Margaret Herrick Library at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Los Angeles. And a special thanks to Val Almendarez at the latter institution, who never fails to guide me in the right direction and put forth a special effort when I call upon him for assistance.

★ NOTES ★

1 THE BILLIONAIRES' HORSESHOE

Sources for the description of Bruce Nelson's practice, the mansion at 1400 Tower Grove, and the open house held there include: David Weddle's observations of the event; David Weddle's interviews with Bruce Nelson, Raymond Bekeris, Suzanne Marx, and Mike Steere; "Southland Real Estate Giants to Merge" by Jennifer Oldham and Diane Wedner, Los Angeles Times, December 2, 2000. Sources on the background of Iris Cantor include the "Hot Property" column of the Los Angeles Times, April 27, 2000. Sources for the statistics on the Saperstein house include author's interviews with architect Richardson Robertson III and the "Hot Property" column from the July 23, 2000, edition of the Los Angeles Times. Sources on the Beverly Park development include David Weddle's interview with Brian Adler.

Sources for background on the Beverly Hills Hotel's Polo Lounge include David Weddle's interviews with Bruce Nelson; Lisa Marriotte, director of public relations for the Beverly Hills Hotel; Marc Wanamaker, archivist for the Beverly Hills Historical Society; and members of the entertainment industry; The Pink Palace by Sandra Lee Stuart; "And the Best Look Is" by Barbara Thomas, Los Angeles Times, March 21, 2000; "The Fairy Tale's Over for the Kingdom of Brunel" by Richard Behar, Fortune, February 1, 1999; "That Pink Hotel" by Hilary de Vries, New York Times, August 13, 1995; "Real Hollywood Never Died: It Was Just Being Renovated" by Rene Chan, New York